

“This project has been long coming, and this will be a game-changer for all student-athletes, as well as other students who want to exercise, play intramural sports, and engage in other outdoor activities that demand good drainage and lights. This is another step for Corban toward being the university of choice for Christ-followers in the Pacific Northwest.”

– Sheldon C. Nord, Ph.D, Corban University President

“I’m so appreciative of all those who have gone before me who have worked hard to make this happen. This Athletic Complex will be such a gift to our student athletes, as well as the whole Corban and Salem community.”

– Sue Roth, Corban University Athletic Director

“I’m all about doing things that bring the entire Corban community together, and I believe the athletic complex is going to be one of those things. At Corban, it feels like we’re all one big family, and we want to be able to support each other and cheer for each other. I also think the athletic complex is going to help more than just athletes pursue their fitness goals. I have tons of friends here at Corban who still want to be active and healthy, but they’re not a full-time athlete anymore. Having a track and field on campus is going to benefit our entire community. It’s going to bring us together, help us stay healthy, and give us a place to support each other in full force.”

– Tobi Adeoye, Corban University Track & Field Athlete and Student Body President

“The number one thing for us is spiritual growth, and the academic piece is a vital part of that and the athletic part of their experience really fits into that commitment, too. We want to create an environment where our student-athletes are learning what it means to fit into a culture that really reflects Christ, and this athletic complex will help us do exactly that by creating a centralized location for our student-athletes to practice, compete, fellowship, and grow alongside each other.”

– Norm Berney, Corban University Track & Field Head Coach for 17 Years

“Having dedicated space and facilities on campus will add more of a sense of ownership and more connectivity to the school and what we’re doing here. When people see that we are investing in our programs enough to have a space on campus, it makes a huge difference. It will help build more pride in the lacrosse program because we will be getting better faster with our own space to practice whenever we can. I’m also really eager to dip into what’s going on in Salem and help impact the community—inviting the community and local schools in for clinics and helping develop opportunities and leagues for younger kids.”

– Kylie McMinn, Corban University Women’s Lacrosse Head Coach

“We are beyond excited to finally break ground on our new facility. We want to thank everyone who donated and supported us with this project.”

– Tim Kagey, Corban University Men’s Soccer Head Coach
